Thieu Will Quit If He Fails to Get Half of the Vote

By Alvin Shuster

SAIGON, Sept. 12 (NYT).—President Nguyen Van Thieu officially opened his unopposed presidential campaign last night by saying that he would resign from office if he received less than 50 percent of the votes cast on Oct. 3.

The voters who opposed him, he said in a television speech, could cast "irregular" ballots, which would then be counted as votes of no-confidence. But Mr. Thieu did not explain to the South Vietnamese how they could render their ballots

Other officials have said, however, that voters who want to show their unhappiness with the Thieu government could do so only by mutilating the ballots or throwing them away, as provided in the alection law. A vote is legally regarded as irregular or void, for example, if a voter merely puts an empty envelope in the ballot hox after tossing away the ballot ltself.

"As I want everything to be clear-cut." Mr.

Thieu said, "I will consider an irregular ballot as a ballot expressing non-confidence. Therefore, at the counting of the votes, I will consider all regular ballots as expressing confidence and all irregular ballots as expressing non-confidence. This will be a clear way for me to assess your confidence or non-confidence.

This will not be a distinction easy to under-stand for most South Vietnamese, who are relative newcomers to the election process. Accordingly, most observers and diplomats ex-

Saigon Units Continue Drive Below DMZ, Kill 33 of Foe

SAIGON, Sept. 12 (UPI).—A against Communist rocket and major South Vietnamese sweep across Quang Tri Province below the Demilitarized Zone has killed 33 Communist soldiers in "sporadic contacts," military spokesmen said today.

The largest single fight in the week-old operation "Lam Son 810," covering some 625 square miles of mountainous jungles, flared yesterday about eight miles west of the Fuller combat base, the spokesmen said.

Government rangers also clashed with a North Vietnamese unit and killed 10 of the enemy with the support of tighter-bombers and artillery, the South Vietnamese command said, One South Vietnamese ranger was wounded. Spokesmen said the South Vietnamese also captured 40 antitank mines and 30 rocket-propelled grenades in the action, about eight miles north of the old Khe Sanh U.S. Marine base.

Supply Line Target

More than 13,000 South Vietnamese troops, supported by about 2,000 Americans, are involved in the campaign aimed at disrupting North Vietnamese sup-ply routes in advance of the Octoer monsoon season. Government spokesmen described South Vietnamese losses in the drive as "light." Military sources said the push would continue at lack of contact. Intelligence had indicated more than 10,000 North Vietnamese troops were in the 25mile-long operation area. In other action, B-52 bombers struck five times in the area yes-terday and today, the U.S. Command said. The targets were troop "staging areas."

The B-52s, since Aug. 13, have unloaded more than 25 million pounds of explosives along the DMZ defense line and possibly may have driven Communist forces back into Lactian sanctuaries to the west.

Hanoi Indicates Floods Cause Major Damage

The regime continued to re-main silent on the number of deaths, injuries and refugees caused by the nation's worst floods in at least 26 years.

Hanoi ordered its army commanders to carry out flood-relief work and at the same time maintain defenses "against enemies who seek to take advantage of natural disaster." This was an ohvious reference to the United States and its South Vietnamese allies, who are conducting a major offensive south of the Demilitarized Zone that straddles the two Vietnams and "Down with (U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth) Bunker-Americans get the hell home."] The U.S. Embassy, which tried and failed to bring about a contested presidential election, commented through a spokesman last night that it was "studying" Mr. Thieu's speech.

In the speech, Mr. Thieu linked support for him at the polls with backing for the "spirit of anti-Communism." He said he needed a massive show of public support to provide him with "enough prestige to talk to the world, face the Communists and fight for and preserve the peace platform of the whole country."

Mr. Thieu said he hoped that the voting could be carried out "in a most democratic way which cannot be called dishonest" and called on foreigners and Vietnamese, including the opposition, to observe as votes are cast and counted. He said he sincerely welcomed observers "anytime and anywhere in the country."

He said that from now until election day anyone, "provided he be a nationalist," would be free to express his opposition to the government co long as it is done "peacefully, that is, without the use of violence and force, and legally."

Sato Party Official Supports Peking Line on Taiwan's Role

By Takashi Oka

TOKYO, Sept. 12 (NYT).—For the first time, a senior official of Premier Eisaku Sato's ruling Liberal-Democratic party has described the Peking government as the legitimate government of China and said that Taiwan is a part of China.

The official, Yasuhiro Nakasone, chairman of the Liberal-Democrats' 30-man executive board, and the former defense minister, today put forward three principles for normalization of relations between Japan and China. They are: recognition of the People's Republic as the legitimate representative of China; giving substance to this recognition by allocating China's scat in the United Nations Secu-Council to Peking, and acknowledgment that Taiwan is part of China.

Mr. Nakasone made his comments today in a speech at Takasaki, 70 miles northwest of Tokyo. in an address to the city's Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"I am absolutely opposed to eosponsorship of the 'important question' resolution at the United Nations this fall," Mr. Nakasone said. (The resolution, sponsored by the United States, seeks to designate the ouster of Taiwan as an important question requiring a two-thirds majority.)

Diplomacy is not a gambling game," Mr. Nakasone raid. "When the lineup for and against seems balanced at around 57 to 57, the prospects fer this resolution are not very good. But even if the resolution fails, President Nixon has a chance to go to Peking and talk things over. Japan has no such chance. We are in a less advantageous position than the United States. It is stupid to antagonize Peking in this way at the very moment we are trying to show that our policy has changed, that we want to be The expectation is that Mr. Sato will make up his mind about co-sponsorship soon after Foreign

Position Clarified

WASHINGTON, Sept. (UPI).—Japan said yesterday that it had not outrightly rejected a U.S. request to cosponsor a Washington two-China resolution in the United Nations. The Japanese Embassy here sought to clarify press reports to the effect that Poreign Minister Fukuda told a press conference the United States "adequately understands why Japan cannot co-sponsor" the resolution.

The embassy said the "exact intention" of the foreign minister's statement was reported incorrectly because of a mistake in simultaneous translation. "Fukuda's remark was that he was of the view that the American government understood Japan's reasons for not being able at this time to commit itself to co-sponsorship of such a resolution," the embassy said.

Refugee Flow From China Into Hong Kong Increases

-More refugees are leaving China than at any time since 1962, when 60,000 Chinese streamed across the border into Hong Kong within a few weeks. At that time, the Chinese authorities did little to curh the flow because of internal administrative problems.

Today, the land border is militia patrols. But about 12,500 to 15,000 Chinese fled during the first eight months of this year. Officials expect the total for the year to exceed 20,000. In recent years, the annual total has been estimated at 7,000 to 8,000.

Official figures on those who report to the police or are picked up by police patrols show an increase during the warmer months. Officials of refugee organizations say that for every one caught four or five evade detection, which means that 2,500 to 3,000 entered this British colony in August.

Escape by Swimming

Most of the refugees swim to Hong Kong, spending up to 10 hours in the water, usually at night, and covering four to six miles. They demonstrate an extraordinary ingenuity, courage and determination, judging from in-

of Pakistan to take every effort to create conditions that will lead to the return of the refugees and permit the resumption of an effective overall development program," he said.

> Border guards shoot without warning and the sea is patrolled by armed junks, Many swimmers are overcome by cramp or fatigue and drown. Dozens of bodies were washed up on Hong Kong beaches last winter,

Most of the swimmers are between 17 and 25 years of age and have a primary or secondary school education. In July, 90 percent of the refugees who reached Hong Kong and were apprehended were of this group and virtually all of them were "hsia fang" students -- young people sent "down to the countryside" to work with the peasants.

Opposition to the hsia fang program appears to be the main motivation for the young refugees' flight from Ching. A typical student refusee complained that there was "no future" for him in the countryside and said that his education was "being wasted."

Proxmire Says Nixon's Program Does Too Little

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (UPI). Sen. William Proximire, chairman of Congress's Joint Economic Committee, said today that Presfrient Nixon's economic strategy does too little to provide jobs and stimulate consumers to spend. He said he thought unemployment might rise to 6.5 percent.

Sen, Proximire said consumer savings are at a record 8.1 percent and that the government should give people the psycho-logical confidence to spend some of that money. "The purpose of the freeze, the purpose of Phase 2, is to stimolate the consumer and provide jobs, he said. "This is what the President is not doing." Sen. Proxmire, interviewed on CES television, indicated his suoport for much of Mr. Nixon's program. But he proposed a delay in the Jan. 1 rise the Social Security tax, a repeal of the administration's proposed accelerated depreciation allowance for businessmen, and immediate inactment of Mr. Nixon's proposed welfare reforms.

Nixon Approval Believed Set For Big A-Test at Amchitka

ملك استالما

By Thomas O'Toole

President Nixon is understood to be ready to approve the undergorund test of a five-megaton stomic weapon scheduled for next month on the island of Amchitka in the Aleutian archipelago of Alaska

Despite published reports that Mr. Nixon was giving serious consideration to canceling the test. sources close to the White House deny it. The test, code-named Cannikin, is America's first scheduled test of an anti-ballistic missile warhead.

Sources said that Mr. Nixon has given no hint that he will delay the big explosion, either, While the exact date for Cannikin has not been picked, it is understood that it will be held during the first week of October. A 56-foot-wide chamber has been carred out of the volcanic rock near the bottom of a 6,200-foot hole to house the weapon, which will be assembled on the island in about two weeks.

The test has been criticized on the ground that Amchitka lies in a notorious earthquake zone and that the blast could wipe out nesting places of endangered species of sea hirds.

"It's true the President still has time to change his mind and cancel Cannikin," one source said, "but the Atomic Energy Commission has been given no sign that a cancellation is in the works. The AEC is proceeding with all delib-erate speed to conduct this test." Three Reasons

Sources gave three reasons why Cannikin will not be canceled. The Congress has told the Department of Defense to proceed with a limited deployment of this ABM system," a source said. "But before we can proceed with the deployment of such a major weapons system we must test it. That's just common sense,"

Sources also said that the warhead must be tested to convince the Soviet Union that the United States "means business" with the ABM, that any suggestion that the United States is not going ahead with ABM would be interpreted by the Soviet Union as a sign of weakness One of the strongest seasons for going ahead with Cannikin, sources said, is that a cancellation would seriously disrupt any

Bad Weather To Cut Output Of Champagne

PARIS, Sept. 12 (Reuters) .-Poor weather may halve the production of champagne this year after a grape harvest well down from last year's record yield, officials said today.

"The [overall] harvest will be about average or slightly less in volume, but the quality is likely to be better than last year, Marcel Lugan, secretary-general of the French Wine Quality Con-trol Board, said.

Production would be lower in the Loire, Bordeaux, Champagne and Côte du Rhône regions hecause of adverse weather condi-tions in June which prevented pollination of some grapes, Mr. Lugan said.

Mr. Lugan estimated the total crop at about 62 million hecto-liters (1.370 hillion gallons), compared with a yearly average of about 64 million hectoliters (1.4 billion gallons) in the past ten years and last year's peak of 74 million hectoliters (1.63 hillion gallons).

An official at one of the main champague-producing houses said this year's harvest, due to start in a week's time, could be expected to yield less than 60 million bottles of champagne altogether, compared with the 1970 record of 108 million bottles.

Western Union Strike In N.Y., N.J. Is Over

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP) .-The 103-day-old Western Union walkout here ended yesterday as strikers voted "overwhelmingly" to return to work at 10 p.m. tonight, said Jack Jacobson, prestdent of Local 1177, AFT-CIO Communications Workers of America.

Local 1177, representing 3,000 Western Union workers in the New York-New Jersey area, continued the strike after the United Telegraph Workers, representing 17,000 employees across the nation, settled on July 26.

1936-Starting his climb in the Communist party, Khrashchev stood close to Josef Stalin in this photo taken at a Moscow airport ceremony. Twenty years later, as premier, he turned on Stalin, denouncing him as an egomaniac, a murderer and a political blunderer.

Nikita Sergeyevich Khrushchev (1894-1971)

L ATE in the afternoon of Friday, Feb. 24, 1956, a short, round, round-headed, gleamingly bald, baggy-suited man stepped to the microphone at the concluding session of the 20th Congress of the Communist party of the Soviet Union, from which all foreign delegates and reporters had been excluded.

"Comrades," he began in his somewhat harsh-hoarse deliberate voice, "in the report of the Central Committee of the party . . . gates to (this) congress . . . quite a lot has been said about the cult of the individual and about its harmful consequences."

It was well after midnight when the delegates had heard in Nikita Sergeyevich Khrushchev's 20.000word speech was nothing less than a documented, count-bycount indictment of Josef Stalin, then dead about three years and who for a quarter-century had been held up to the Soviet people, Communist and non-Communist and to Communists throughout the world as the infallible geniusleader of his country who had advanced it unerringly along the path toward Socialism.

Whiplash Candor

What some delegates may have suspected but refused to believe, Mr. Khrushchev, the first secretary (chief) of the Soviet party, laid bare with whiplash candor—that Stalin, starting with the terrible purge years of the 1930s, had brought about the deaths of thousands of innocent persons; that he had ruled the party and the country by terror and torture; that be had beeen pusillanimous in World War II; that be had become increasingly vainglorious to the point even of writing his own encomiums; and that he had set up "serious obstacle(s) in the path of Soviet social development." Some of the details were overdrawn, but the portrait was unmistakably

Although this extraordinary speech was never printed in the Soviet press, it was circulated to an astonished public through the Communist party apparatus and marked the start of a 10-year de-Stalinization of Soviet life. The speech was widely published in the West (the U.S. State Department obtained a copy from Yugoslav sources and made it available to newspapers) and it started a chain-reection in the reassessment of Soviet Com-

In speaking out with such un-compromising bluntness, Mr. Khrushchev exhibited some of the brash daring that characterized his 11 years (from 1954 to 1964) as one of the world's most powerful men. The risk was ob-vious: Could Stalin's reputation be denigrated without desizoying the structure of the system that had made him possible? Mr. Khrushchev gambled that it could—and he won, although many observers doubted that he had calculated all the implications of his bravura speech.

Vast Policy Changes ..

Apart from presiding over the vast changes in Soviet and Communist policy that flowed from de-Stalinization (no less profound for the comparatively quiet manner in which they were carried out). Mr. Khrushchev Dut new emphasis on the bread-andbutter goals of Communism ("and what sort of Communist society is it that has no sausage?" he often asked). Moreover, under the compulsions of the hydrogen bomb, he championed a policy of peaceful coexistence (symbolized in the 1963 Nuclear Test Ban Treaty) between Socialist and capitalist states, questioning the popular dictum that war between them was probably inevitable. (He was certain that Communism could provide more abundance than espitalism and would triumph in a peaceful world because of its material attractions). Mr. Khrushchev also accepted some national differences among Socialist countries, as in the mixed economies of Poland and Yugoslavia: but not in Hungary. where he dealt with attempted revolt in 1956 as counter-revolu-tion. Outside the Soviet sphere in Eastern Europe, he was less flexible. He tolerated Castroism for Cuba, but not as a model for had much less use for the Chinese way to Socialism and split the Communist world in a quarrei with Peking over Soviet economic aid, the proper strategy against American "imperialism" and the

Mr. Khrushchev introduced a new style into Soviet politics. Whereas Stalin was reclusive, his successor was a tireless traveler mately acquainted with the cities. towns and villages of his country.

Personal Diplomacy

Just as he journeyed about his own country and Eastern Europe so he traveled extensively in the salesman for Soviet policy (and by implication for Communism? he initiated a personal diplomacy that took him to China, India, Britain, France, Switzerland, Austris and the United States, In two visits to the United States he conferred with President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1959, trekked to California, shucked corn in Iowa. appeared on television; and in the fall of 1960 he was there for a meeting of the UN General Assembly, at which, in a fit of pique, he brandished a shoe and banged it vigorously on his deak.

Behind these travels was not only his voracity for first-hand knowledge of people and events but also a belief that statesmen could and should deal with one another face to face. It was in that vein that he cooperated in the establishing of a "hot line" between the White House and the Kremlin in President John P. Kennedy's administration.

Some of the very extrovert traits that gave Mr. Khrushchev his human dimensions accounted for his downfall. By nature an impatient and impulsive man, he promised his people more than he could deliver. After two excellent harvests in 1956 and 1958, he pledged in 1959 that in seven years the per-capita real income of Soviet citizens was to rise by 40 percent and that the minimum wage would be doubled. There would also be a 40-hour week. And by 1970, agriculture and industry would be producing more than their American counterparts. The Soviet Union was embarking on a new stage of its history—the "full-scale construction of Communist society."

Cuban Gamble

Another ingredient in Mr. Khrushchev's fall was the failure of his gamble in the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 to pay off. Although he claimed at the time to have obtained what be wanted -an American pledge not to attack Cubs-many in the Kremlin believed that the affair was a first-class miscalculation.

He was damaged also by the American U-2 spyplane affair in 1960 and the subsequent breakup of a Paris summit meeting with President Eisenhower, After Mr. Khrushchev's first visit to the United States, be insisted to his colleagues that President Elsenhower was a reasonable man and that statesmen could promote international amity through personal understandings. This homespun theory, part of his impatience to mute the cold war, was severely strained when the U-2 was shot down over the Soviet Union and President Elsenhower took responsibility for the in-

For a fourth thing, his bumptious conduct then and on other occasions, such as the shoe-banging incident at the UN. embarrassed some of his associates, who felt that more dignity befitted the leader of a superpower. Some of them, too, had been bullied by their leader in explosions of temper and were delighted to vote his ouster.

Ranged aginst him, too, were powerful voices in the army. To allocate capital for agricultural supplies and machinery, he was obliged to cut down on spending for heavy industry and defense The army, which had earlier supported him, was dismayed by his schemes to achieve defense at the lowest possible cost and elements of the officer corps, whose jobs were threatened, joined in the pressure against him.

Mao Split Noted

Mr. Khrushchev also caused alarm by the escalation of his quarrel with Mao Tre-tung, the Chinese leader. It had long been a shibboleth of Marxist thinking that the Communist world was necessarily a single entity, since it derived from a single doctrine, and the Soviet leader's China policy seemed to many Soviet and other Communists to threaten the fraternal spirit of world Communism. His handling of the Mao

Finally, there was Mr. Khrushchev's willfulness as well as what take the splotlight. His enemies accused him of both lack of foresight and building a cult of per-sonality. He did indeed push his plans through the Polithuro and was unwilling to accept frustra-tion of his ideas. And he did appear to be insisting on adula-The combination of all his shortcomings came to more than outweigh his virtues in the eyes of his colleagues, and he was pensioned off in October, 1964. But it was a measure of the changes he wrought that he was voted out of office, not shot; and that some of his key policies, such as perceful coexistence and arms limitation and emphasis on Soviet consumer needs, were taken up by his successors, albeit in a less flamboyant fashion. .

Part of Mr. Khrushchev's success as a Soviet leader was his idiosyncratic style-his easy and infectious smile that showed the marked gap between two front teeth, his thundering anger, his earthy wit, his use of Russian proverbs, his capacity for strong drink, his rapport with workers and farmers. When he talked he jabbed his chubby fingers at the chest of the person listening to him, and he could say some impolitic things, as when he told Western diplomats in the Kremlin: "History is on our side-we bury you."

Simple Maxims

He was uncomfortable with intellectuals and impatient with abstract theory—both attitudes that reflected his own life and his Marxism was once described as a set of rather simple maxims in which be believed deeply.

It was as a practical man that Mr. Khrushchev rose from lowly beginnings to the top in the Communist hierarchy. He was born April 17, 1894, in the mud hut of his grandfather in Kalinova, a poor village in Kursk Province, where Great Russia borders on "My grandfather was a serf, the property of a landlord who could sell him if be wished, or trade him for a hunting dog." Mr. Khrushchev once recalled in tracing his background.

"My father was a farmer," he went on, "who worked in the (coal) mines in the winter in the hope that he would some day earn enough money to buy a horse, so that he could raise enough cabbage and potatoes to feed his family.

"As for myself, I began working as soon as I could walk. I berd-ed calves, then sheep, and finally the landlord's cows, until I was 15. Then I went with my father to the coalfields of the Donbas to work in the shops and mines. I worked at a factory owned by the Germans, at coal pits owned by Frenchmen and Belgians. There I discovered something about capitalists. They are all alike, whatever their nationality. All they wanted from me was the most work for the least money that would keep me

Joined Party in 1918

In his brief account of his early years. Khrushchev omitted to mention that he had not joined the Bolshevik party until 1918, about a year after the outbreak of the Russian Revolution. In the Civil War, Mr. Khrushchev fought as a member of the Guards, working in the political department of the 9th Army in the Ukraine.

When the Civil War ended, Mr. Khrushchev went to Rutchenkovo as a party organizer His first wife, to whom he had been married in 1916, died, it is said, in the famine of 1921, but this aspect of his life was obscure. His climb up the party ladder began in earnest in 1922, when he was sent to the Don Technical College at Yuzovka to remedy his lack of formal education and to become acquainted with Marxism.

At the college he was named party secretary, a post of considerable importance that he held for three years. He also remarried. His wife, Nins. who ac-companied him to the United States, was a schoolteacher and is believed to have smoothed some of his rough edges.

Meteoric Rise

His rise was meteoric: After holding a series of minor posts he became second in command of the Moscow city party in 1933; its chief in 1934; a member of the party's Central Committee the same year, making him one of the hundred or so most powerful men in the Soviet Union; and Stalin's paranola was growing —a plot of distinguished Jewish doctors to kill Soviet leaders was concocted in his brain-and, Mr. Khrushchev suggested in his 1956 speech, even those closest to the dictator felt apprehensive for their safety. In these circumstance's Stalin's death as the result of a stroke was timely. "I wept," Mr. Khrushchev later told W. Averell Harriman, the American diplomat, "After all, we were his pupils and owed him everything. Like Peter the Great, Stalin fought barbarism with barbarism but he was a great Georgi Malenkov was Stalin's immediate successor, but in the wheeling and dealing he was either forced or persuaded to drop his job as principal party secre-tary while retaining the Soviet premiership. This step gave Mr. Khrushchev his opening, for he took over virtual control of the party organization-machinery that be knew best of all.

Exit Malenkov

By early 1955 Mr. Khrushchev had strengthened his position sufficiently to strike down Mr. Malenkov. He accomplished this in part by getting army support the pleaded that the Soviet hydrogen bomb detonated in 1953 required stronger defenses), and the new alignment Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin was premier and Mr. Khrushchev was the party leader.

The maneuver that disposed of Mr. Malenkov (whose general policies Mr. Khrushchev was to adopt) was one step in the development of a post-Stalin consensus. Another was dismissal of Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Stalin's longtime foreign minister, which culminated in his removal from power in 1957 in the so-called 'anti-party" affair. Although Mr. Khrushchev was clearly the chief Soviet leader as of 1954, when Mr. Malenkov went into effective eclipse, his position was vastly enhanced by his "secret speech," at the perty Congress in 1956. Its themethat Stalin had abused his power -skipped lightly over Mr. Khrushchev's own role and that of his principal associates. However, by emphasizing the corrective steps the party had taken since 1953 and was prepared to take, the speech cast Mr. Khrushchev in a favorable light: He was now to pursue a policy of fairness and strict legality. And there was in fact a thaw. Hundreds of Stalin's victims were posthumously rehabilitated. Criticism of Stalin appeared in print.

Some of the fears in Soviet life were muted. The authority of the party, as a collective group, was strengthened, and with it the principle of collegiality. And eventually, the speech con-tributed to the routing of Mr. Moletov and other hard-liners inside and outside the Soviet

-the same dual role occupied by For more than air years he would rule without serious challenge. He grew cocky and domineering with his colleagues, unable to believe, until it was too late, that he could be deposed. As bitterness with China escalated Mr. Khrushchev was faced with discontent at home, Harvests were poor, grain had to be imported from the United States; and in 1962 meat and butter prices were raised. Instead of the Khrushehev promises of a rapid advance to plenty, the Soviet economy was creaking.

All of these things came to a head in October, 1964, when members of the Polithuro were quietly called to a meeting; with Leonid I. Brezhney in the chair. members of the top leadership. Ironically, the man who Mr. Khrushehev sought to discredit Stalin is buried next to the Kremlin wall, and only last year a bust was installed in his honor, Stalin, of course, died in 1953 while in office, and his death was a time of national grief for the majority of Russians who did not know or refused to believe that he was responsible for the mass arrests and backward state of the Soviet economy.

The Prayda obituary differed from the usual effusive eulogies that are printed in honor of leading Soviet figures. The reference to "special pensioner" meant that upon his forced retirement he was awarded a private pension and did not have to receive only the social security benefits awarded on the basis of salary and time on the job. The cool tone of the notice was sure to be interpreted by both party propagandists and by ordinary Russians as a signal that even in his death there would be no change in the official evaluation of Mr. Khrushchev that since his custer has been quite negative. Word of Mr. Khrushchev's death was first releved to West-

Presidential press secretary Ron Ziegler said:

"Nikita Khrushchev, of course, was a major world figure and his contribution to Soviet history is well known. The President was well acquainted with Mr. Khrushchev and respected him 25 a vigorous and colorful advocate of his beliefs."

Other American expressions of sympathy at the death of Mr. Khrushchev came from industrialists Cyrus Eaton and farmer Roswell Garst, from Sens. Edward M. Kennedy and Hubert H. Humphrey, and from former Ambassadors Averell Harriman and George F. Kennan.

Sen. Humphrey, who used to joke that Mr. Khrushchev was the only man he ever met who could out-talk him, said the former Soviet premier was "one of the most dramatic and impressive figures of world politics."

Marathon Talk "He broke the monolith of international Communism," said Sen. Humphrey, who had a marathon, eight-hour 25-minute lalk with Mr. Khrushchev in "He broke down many of the barriers which previously isolated Russians from the political and economic institutions of the West," Sen. Humphrey said.

Mr. Garst, who entertained Mr. Khrushchev at his farm near Coon Rapids, Iowa, in 1959, reered him as a man who had a great sense of humor and did more than any Soviet leader before him to open up his country to the rest of the world.

"He was a hardy individual who liked a good joke," Mr. Garst said. "He did a great job of opening doors so that people could visit with each other that hadn't before. Stalin wasn't very communicative and didn't want people to visit Russia. Khrushchev changed that."

Sen. Kennedy, who is on a visit to Britain, said in London he was sorrowed by the news of Mr. Khrushchev's death. The Relations between the two countries have never been as good since Mr. Khrushchev was overthrown by his more dogmatic comrades in arms. In the Yugoslav press, he was hailed as "The man under whom the Stalinist ice began to crack."

an "unlucky" landing.
"Measurements show that the moon-landing of Luna-18 in these difficult (mountain) topo-graphical conditions was unlucky," Tass said.

As usual, the official Soviet reports did not spell out clearly what had gone afoul with the nine-day-old mission.

But Western space observers said the wording suggested that the Sovicts may have aimed it for the rugged Appolonius Moun-tains, where it landed and was lost, in a bid to dig up and bring back some ancient moon soil of the type America's Apollo-f5 secured. This interpretation, if correct.

would mean that the craft did not crash out of control but rather landed in the general targct area and tumbled out of control on touchdown. Unlike the piloted U.S. moon-landers, the automatic Soviet craft lacked the fine-maneuvering advantage of plloting with direct sight. Bonn Cool to Finnish Move To Recognize 2 Germanys

BONN, Sept. 12.—West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's Ostpolitik-policy toward the Eastbackfired yesterday. It was already bogged down in a new and complicated wrangle with the East Germans when, on abl: help the Finns. Priday, the Finnish government summoned the West German and East German trade representative in Helsinki.

the Finnish step. It noted that the Finns had based their proposal on an improvement in the European political atmosphere, "The process mentioned by the Finnish government has not, however, gone so far that an unequivocal positive judgment of the future developments is warranted," the Foreign Office said.

"Rather, we stand only at the beginning of this process, and there are still difficult negotiations ahead in the case of the Berlin regulations," it continued. "Just at this time all should be avoided which could influence the efforts of those involved."

Bonn said it would examine the Finnish initiative carefully and would discuss it with the three Western allies, since it involves the powers responsible for Germany as a whole.

But the West German state-

By proposing a simultaneous recognition of the two Germanys, the Pinns appeared to be giving West Germany the right to veto their proposal. That Bonn would probably do this was indicated by the Foreign Office communique.

"The standpoint of the federal government to premature establishment of diplomatic relations with East Germany by other states is known," it said. "It is unchanged."

At the least the Finnish initistive was an embarrassment for Mr. Brandt's government, which is dedicated to improving ties with Eastern Europe and to a realistic approach to all problems, including that of East Germany. If it is forced to veto the Finnish project, the East Germans will inevitably charge Mr. Brandt with hypocrisy.

The Khrushchev Era

It lasted little more than a decade-From Stalin's death in 1953 to his deposition in 1964-but the era of Nikita Khrushchev was critical for the Soviet Union and the world. There were other statesmen of stature and repute in his day...Kisenhower and Kennedy in the United States, Eden and Macmillan in Britain, De Gaulle in France, Mao in China. But the Khrushchev color and flamboyance, his crude panache, his occasional recklessness combined with fundamental shrewdness, made the decade peculiarly his own.

Nikita Khrushchev took the Soviet Union out of the dark night of Stalinism, out of that pervasive fear which made the Kremlin a symbol of terror for the Russian people and all their neighbors. He broke a long tradition in his country of eliminating political rivals with the bullet, and an almost equally strong tradition which judged all nations by their ideological purity-as determined by Josef Stalin. In a land that had long sacrificed bread to arms and factories, he paid more attention to bread.

His failures were numerous, and some of his ventures were dangerous in his own time and still carry a threat: He injected Soviet power into Cuba and evoked the missile crisis; he extended that power to the Middle East, with ultimate results that have not yet been made manifest: he exacerbated relations with China, and the end of that drama is not in sight. Much of this turmoil may be attributed to the defects of the Khrushchev qualities.

Yet Stalin's rigidity would not have tolerated a Nasser as ally. Geared to the tank columns and swarming infantry of his great patriotic war he would not have vaulted to the stars, like Krushchev's cosmonauts, or leaped the Atlantic with missiles. Neither could Stalin grasp the total threat of nuclear destruction involved in his own rejection of any curb on the Soviet Union's nuclear development; neither could Stalin conceive of "peaceful coexistence"that phrase which Khrushchev took from Cbou En-lai and Nehru.

That Khrushchev died a "nonperson," his passing marked initially by an atmosphere of punctured secrecy that paid no honor to him, or to the government that succeeded him, indicates that the Byzantine thinking of the Kremlin has not altered completely since Stalin's day. That he died in bed, seven years after his fall from power, shows that it has altered considerably. And if a Soviet fleet in the Mediterranean and Middle East on the brink of war may be considered part of his legacy, so ara the Berlin agreement, the SALT talks, the prospect of a European security treaty.

For good or ill, Nikita Khrushchev, with his peasant cunning and his extravagant gestures, forcibly propelled the Soviet Union into the real world of the last half of the 20th century. And on balance, the world must find more good than ill in his highly flavored reign.

The cabinet-level conference between the United States and Japan engendered angry argument and wound up with both governments still far apart on their trade and monetary disputes.

The Nixon administration is convinced that it can compel Premier Sato's government to revalue the yen enough to wipe out Japan's trade surplus with the United States-on pain of being excluded from the American market by tariff walls, quotas and other barriers to trade.

Japan is refusing to submit to this extreme American pressure. The Sato government has suffered heavy political damage at home as a result of Mr. Nixon's two policy "bombshells"-his planned visit to Communist China and his new economic policy, particularly the floating of the dollar and the imposition of a 10 percent surcharge on imports.

The Tokyo regime, which cannot let itself appear a weak American vassal, is hitting back as best it can, even refusing to comto the United States effort to preserve Nationalist China's membership in the United Nations.

It is not too late to prevent this dangerous turn in Japanese-American relations from escalating into a full-scale political and economic flasco. But to do so will require greater flexibility and realism than have yet been present in either Washington or Tokyo.

The Japanese government must recognize that a lasting improvement in its trade relations with the United States requires a further upward valuation of the yen. The recent decision of Tokyo to float the yen was a move in this direction, but Washington's unwillingness to indicate when and under what conditions it would abolish the 10 percent import surcharge has apparently caused Japan to tie additional changes in the value of the yen to the multilateral negotiations with Europe. Japan has also moved some distance toward trade liberalization, but not enough.

Part of the trouble is a growing suspicion -not only in Tokyo hut throughout the world—that the Nixon administration is little interested in returning to liberal trade principles, despite the President's rhetorical tributes to those principles.

The time has come for Mr. Nixon to clarify his intentions on trade policy. The 10 percent surcharge has served as a lever to start movement toward a needed realignment of exchange rates and a major reform of the international monetary system. But any hint of American intention to freeze in the import surcharge and the discriminatory features of the proposed 10 percent investtex credit will much other nations to a conviction that the real Nixon doctrine in the economic area is protectionist—a conviction that would bring worldwide

An opportunity to begin reversing the perilous Japanese-American estrangement will present itself in Mr. Nixon's meeting with Emperor Hirohito in Alaska later this month. On an even broader scale, movement toward a resolution of the overall economic impasse should be initiated by the United States at the meeting of the Group of Teu industrial nations in London this week.

Crisis as Usual

Who would think that the world is still in the threes of its biggest financial crisis since the second World War? Not the Group of Ten-the rich nations' economic clubto judge by the outcome of their meeting in Paris last weekend and by the prospects for their gathering in London next week.

The divisions between the Western uations. over tha future of the world's trading and monetary arrangements is not a matter of mere textbook concern. Unless agreement is reached-and soon-the danger is that each national government will attempt a partial, necessarily nationalist, solution on its own. This would mean retreat into a world of mutually hostile and economically protectionist trade blocs.

Isolating South Africa

The cancellation of the South African crickat tour of Australia had surely become inevitable. The difficulties experienced by the South African rugby team in Australia this summer made it hard enough to complete that tour, and it is obviously much easier to disrupt a cricket match. Even if it had proved physically possible to play for any length of time, the strain on the players would have been such as to make the tour a cricketing farce. There is indeed a remarkable parallel between the experience of South African sportsmen in Britain in 1970 and in Australia this year. The demoustrations against the Springboks rugby team in Britain last year were so sustained as to force the reluctant conclusion that the cricket tour, which was due to follow within a matter of months, was simply not a practical proposition. Now in Australia the ordeal of the rugby players has prevented the cricketers following in their wake. The effect is to intensify the isolation of South African sportsmen from international competition. The South African cricket teamwhich happens ironically to be probably the finest the country has ever produced-is unable to play any side worthy of its mettle. In other sports as well, the doors are being shut against South Africa.

'You Mean After November 13th I Come Down Into the Fridge?'

Japan Is in Doubt

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON—You don't have to be Gen. De Ganlie or Winston Churchill to imagine enterprises of pith and moment aifecting the United States and Japan. But you'd never know it from the agenda of the joint cabinet talks held here in Washington last week.

The meeting dealt with a vast array of hot, but essentially small, potatoes. And there lies the reason why Japanese-American relations have recently been going sour.

At the top of the agenda for last week's business was the matter of exchange rates. Secretary of State William Rogers came out flatly and asked the Japanese for a major upward revision of the yen against the dollar,

The Japanese, in a gesture that reflected the m occasion, leaked an edvance text of Secretary Rogers's remarks. Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda. even before hearing Mr. Rogers, announced that yen revaluation was a multilateral, not a bilateral, subject. He warned the United States there might be "retaliation" unless this country lifted the recent 10 percent tax on imports "at the earliest pos-

Peking Issue

A second issue important in the talks last week was Chinese representation at the United Nations. Secretary Rogers indicated that, while accepting a UN seat for Communist China, Washington would also fight to keep a seat for Taiwan. He asked Japan to co-sponsor the American resolution.

The Japanese replied they wanted to study the matter further. In fact, no Japanese commitment would be worth anything now anyway. For the issue has become a central bone of contention in Japanese politics, dividing especially the ruling Liberal Democratic party of Premier Eisaku

A third issue for the talks last week involved Japanese textile exports to this country. The men from Tokyo were reminded of President Nixon's pledge to Amorican producers that he would get from them an international agreement limiting the flow.

The Japanese replied they had already put into effect voluntary limitations on textile exports. Since the voluntary agreement was only two months old, it made sense to wait and see how it worked.

wholly trivial. They are bot items for Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Pinance and Commerce in the weeks and months sheed. Such matters always, and necessarily, dominate ministerial meetings. And they do have to be explored. Still, yen rates and the exact texts of UN resolutions and the export volume of knitted ierseys are not exactly Olympian subjects. There are far bigger tasues

Defense of Japan

There is the matter of Japanese defense and whether it should be nuclear or not. There is the related question of Japan's role in the three-cornered world of the United States, Russia and Japan. There is the connected issue of Japanese relations with Southeast Asia, India and the rest of the underdeveloped world.

In the past these questions could easily be left unasked. Japan's low profile was assumed.

and the world of Japanese-American relations could safely be left to ministerial meetings.

But that is no longer the case. Everything about Japan from the inner dynamics of her polities to her external weight in the world is up for grabs. More than at any time since Pearl Harbor, Japan The need, accordingly, is to start thinking big about Japan. Unless there is open discussion about the large issues, the acrimony generated by fights over exchange rates and resolutions and tariffs could drive Washington and Tokyo to irrational steps, What, after all, would it profit the United States to gain a couple of points in yen revaluation if

e Mountain, is charging down these lovely valleye to the Rappahannock and the sea. It is startling to come home to an old pre-Revolutionary cabin in these hills after a long juurney into China, for it is a reminder of how old the American Revolution really is, and how young are the revolutions of China and the Soviet Union.

The Chinese Communists are now celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of their party. Though they represent the oldest civilization in the human family and almost a quarter of the human race, they talk as if history began 21 years ago when they defeated Chiang Kai-shek and took over the administration of China.

But down the road here in Fauquier County of Virginia, John Marshall, the fourth Chief Justics of the United States, the eldest of fifteen children of Thomas Marshall (1730-1802) and Mary Keith Marshall, daughter of an immigrant Scottish preacher, was writing revolutionary law more than a hundred years be-fore Mao Tae-tung began study-ing Karl Marx as an obscure assistant in the library at Peking University.

The interesting thing about this is that the Chinese Do longer think about America as a revolutionary force in the world, and to a lesser extent this is also true of the Russians. Though the United States, despite all its disappointments, has created a more equal society than either the Soviet Union or Communist China, it is etill regarded in Peking and Moscow as a selfish and even repressive state, and even our old friends in Britain, France and Germany have their

Something Wrong

So there is obviously something wrong. In the headlines of the world's press and in the voice of radio and the pictures on television these days Washington seems to be in trouble. Not only in Vietnam but in world trade and finance, even with the young, the poor and the blacks at home there is controversy. Even the "almighty dollar" is being traded at a discount in the capitals of the world. Yet if you listen to officials in Peking, Tokyo or London. Washington sounds more reasonable and generous than any of them, more willing to forget the past and concentrate on the future, more conscious of the present scientific revolution, more aware and more willing to tay to work out some kind of new world order for the control of war, money and mili-

To be fair about it, no politician

LTERY RUN, Va.-The equinox in the world has been more willhas come to Virginia a little ing to adjust to the facts and early this year, and Fiery Run, fed by gully-washing rains off and political power than President Nixon. He has been very late in the process, but in his new China policy and his new economic policy he has been willing to rebuke the past and even to criticize his own anti-Communist and anti-welfare-state policies of the last quartercentury.

In short whatever his views have been in the political struggles in Washington over the last 25 years, Mr. Nixon has come out in the end in favor of the American progressive and even revolutionary tradition, and in so doing he was going with Chief Justice Marshall and the American pragmatic and progressive ideas of the last century.

Down these Virginia lanes, this is not a popular policy. Fauquier County is conservative Harry Byrd country. It is intensely patriotic, and even hawkish on Vletnam. But it has to deal with the realities of the land and its people and, conservative as it is, it is beginning to show a readiness for change.

The Difference

This is the big difference be-tween the United States and China or Russia. The United States is beginning to admit that maybe it has been wrong in the past. Fauguler County used to grow corn and plow the hillsides and let the soil slide down into Plery Run and the Reppahannock. but now it is raising new cattle on new pastures with new strains of grass and even taking a new look at its political as well as its agricultural future.

Peking and Moscow differ on many things, but they seem to agree on the proposition that, at least in public, they have never been wrong about anything. They defend everything they have done in the past, no matter how silly, and in fairness to Pres Nixon, he has not been making the same mistake.

He has said, quite clearly, that Washington's policy on Vietnam has been wrong, that his demestic economic policies have not worked out, that the time has come to negotiate new pelicies at home and abroad and that for this purpose he should go to Paking and should try to errange an accommodation with Japan and other nations on trade and monetary policies. In so doing, Mr. Nixon has finally come around to the pregmatic and progressive tradition of John Marshall. He has not been a revolutionary symbol is the past, but his new China and his economic policies have brought him full circle and hopefully he will get the support of the Deno-crate, the alifes and the Com-municipal on this fundamental

A few minutes later, Ehrush-chevs mercurial nature praduced a quite different result. Les An-geles Mayor Norths Peulson stood up to publicly chide Kurmhchev for his earlier statement that 'we will hury you." Khrushchev react-ed with rage. He already had explained that remark, he said. and it referred to economic competition, not to a military strike, "I am deeply concerned over these conscious distortions of my thoughts," he shouled at the stunned audience. Tre never mentioned any rockets."

"Let's not try to bury one anether," Khrushchev declared "We are the two most powerful nations and the consequences of a play on words can be too sad for sur peoples. Our rockets are on the assembly line. I have come with serious intentions and you try to reduce the matter to simply a joke. If you want to compete in a cold war, go ahead, but think what it means with modern weapons."

Furious Attack

Khrushchev worked himself into a fury. It had taken him 12 hours to fly to America, he said, but it would take "even less" to return. He turned on Poulson, shouting again: "I trust that even the mayor reads the press. In my country the chairman of the city council reads the press or he isn't elected the next time he runs. If you want to insist on this cold war line, then there can be no thought of disarma-

Khrushchev was back to his old self.

After the crowd at the San Luis Obispo step, he was on top again but still needling about Disneyland, "I'm especially glad that the house arrest I was placed under has been lifted" and "they allowed me to approach the people and to look them in the eye."

"I'm a political leader." he said. "My strength is my tie with the people. To lose the tie is to lose all influence."

U.S. Sets a High Price on Monetary Stability

By Robert Kleiman

NEW YORK (NYT) -- President Nixan's Hertz-Avis approach to the world economy keeping America No. 1--undoubtedly appeals to many voters at home. But there is less enthusiasm abroad. Last week the country's chief allies were asked to help finance Mr. Nixon's ambition by absorbing a far greater increase in American exports than they had dreamed would be sought. Otherwise, they were told, the basic American balance of payments deficit would quadruple to an annual rato of $10 to $13 billioo.

The new estimates suggested that Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, who seems to be in the driver's seat now in Washington, is setting a high price for ending the world monetary and trade crisis. The improvement he seeks of up to $12 billion in the U.S. balance of payments must be achieved, in his view, mainly by revaluing upward the ourrencies of America's major commercial partners abroad to restore a large American trade surplus, Revaluation would give U.S. business a competitive edge by raising tha prices of European and Japanese exports and lowering those of the United States. The new balance-of-payments estimates, it was learned, were unveiled by Treasury Undersecretary Paul Volker at the Paris meeting of the so-called Group of Ten, the non-Communist world's major trading countries. America's nine partners understandably emerged in a state of shock. Since one country's sur-plus is another's deficit, the U.S. demand for a $10 to $12 billion improvement in its trade balance means that other countries must see their trade balances deteriorate by the same amount.

Difficult Politically

Moreover, upward revaluation is a deflationary step that is po-litically difficult to take. To case this operous task, both Japan and the Common Market last week urged the United States to join in a mutual readjustment of currency rates by a partial devaluation of the dollar. Before August, Mr. Connally himself insisted that the "hasic" annual deficit in the American payments balance abroad was only $2 hillion to $3 billion. The new estimate is a demand for other countries to buy niore American goods to the tune of a 35 to 50 percent increase in the volume of American exports, the exact figure depending on whether American imports decline, as hoped, or continue to climb as economic recovery pro-

Secretary Connally will be pressed this week to prove his claim and to reveal precisely the other demands he wants satisfied before ending the dollar float and the "temporary" import surcharge that overnight, on Aug. 15, almost doubled the height of the American tariff wall. Unless he so, his projected conference in London Wednesday with the Group of Ten finance ministers is unlikely to go any better than Mr. Volker's session with their deputies. That meeting went so hadly that agreement could not be reached even on an agenda for Wednesday's ministerial conference, and participants emerged predicting a year of monetary disorder before new arrangements can be set in place.

The danger in such a course is a resumption of the trade and monetary warfare of the 1930s, when competitive devaluations. import restrictions, export subsidies and other "beggar-thy-neighbor" policies helped trigger a world depression and kept it going by inhibiting trade.

The beginnings of such economic warfare already can be seen. Canada is subsidizing exports to scale the new American tariff wall. Britain is reducing interest rates to weaken the pound and hamper its currency's float upward against the dollar. For the same purpose, France and Japan are employing tight exchange equirols and other countries are using market inter-

The Nixon administration is far from being of one mind about this test of strength. Views of various agencies differ about the size of the future American pay-ments imbalance and the shift in exchange rates needed, and equally about Mr. Connally's other demands and hir tactics of non-negotiation. "We're asking an awful lot for the little Mr. Connally is prepared to give," commented one highly placed official.

Mr. Connally is prepared to surrender the import surcharge -but only after other countries revalue their currencles upward to his liking, and agree to yield concessions on trade barriers, defense-burden-sharing and a more flexible monetary system.

Europe and Japan are prepared to see some immediate measures of flexibility introduced when new exchange rates are fixed, including somewhat wider bands of fluctuation. But they see negotiation of a new monetary system and a new round of reciprocal trade talks as longer-range issues. Moreover, they question the projections the U.S. Treasury advances of future American payments deficits in conditions of full employment.

And America's trading partners argue that they have no obligation, by providing an American trade surplus, to finance American military expenditures in Vietnam or American investment abroad, each of which was larger than the annual American payments impalance before this past

Most important, they want the import surcharge and "buy American" investment tax credit lifted rapidly. They want to know what exchange rate changes and precisely what actions on defense and trade Mr. Connally is demanding before the United States brings that new tariff wall down. No such specifics have yet been put on the table. President Nixon speaks of revitalizing the American competitive spirit and work ethic as the route to economic equilibrium abroad. But, as America's allies see it. Secretary Connally is not proposing to remedy the American payments imbalance by improved productivity. He is asking America's trading partners instead to wipe that imbalance out by the stroke of a pen, by revaluing their currencies upward. increasing their export prices and decreasing those of the United States overnight.

The Europeans and the Japanese both are prepared to move part way, if Washington will share the political strain by devaluing the dollar at the same time. But they are angered by the long catalogue of vague demands Mr. Connally is making and skinned now by the alleged dimension of the future American payments gap he insists they alone must close,

In the Best of All Soviet Worlds, the Future Of Siberia Would Be Hundreds of Bratsks...

"Russia, your maternal image

Has been rerealed to me in Bratsk ..."

-Yevreny Yevtushenko

By Robert G. Kaiser RRATSK (WP).-This, the Soviet version of the new Jerusalem, the future as it ought to be, here today. Twenty years ago Bratsk was a dot in the vast Siberian forest called the Taiga. Now it is a booming town of nearly 200,000, and the home of one of the biggest hydroelectric projects in the world. Bratsk was built by young people from all over the Soviet Union who responded to the call of adventure, or to the promise of extraordinarily high salaries, or perhaps both. They started to come here in the early 1950s, when the residents of Bratsk were mostly bears and—in a short summer—clouds of mosquitoes.

The pioneers of Bratsk became national heroes in official propaganda, in songs, in a long Yevtushenko poem called "Bratsk Hydroelectric Statlon." Many of the original builders of Bratsk are still here, watching their children grow up and their hair get gray, though many have also

"We are the real Communists." one enthusiastic resident boasted, "we are really building socialism." He said it with a mysterious wink The people of Bratsk don't try to hide their distaste for "the other side of the Urals," where they presume bureaucracy to be rampant and stiffing.

The enormous dam at Bratsk is decorated with a famous quota-tion from Lenin: "Communism is Soviet power plus the electrifica-tion of the whole country." This has been the by-word of Soviet electrification for 51 years, "We have our own version of the slogan," confides a young Siberian, "Soviet power is Communism minus the electrification of the whole country."

In the best of all possible Soviet worlds, the future of Siberia would be hundreds Bratsks, all cut out of the Taiga and the swamps that cover un-measured and perhaps un-measurable wealth in the form of oil, coal, ores of all kinds, diamonds and gold.

The history of Bratsk suggests the kind of obstacles that make the development of Siberia so difficult. When the first workers arrived on the seene of the proposed new dam, local hunters carrying their guns suggested that the dam should be built somewhere else, thank you. For several years the workers here took two years just to bring electricity to Bratsk-a 360-mile line had to built from Irkutsk to the southeast.

The first workers were ravaged by giant mosquitoes in July and August, and frozen by the cold in winters that last 285 days a year. Sasha Guryevich, an engineer from the Ukraine, cama to Bratsk in 1957 and found himself working with an air hammer breaking up rocks used in the dam's foundations.

Mr. Gusyvich is a bright-eyed, curly-haired man with a barrel chest, the result of his weight lifting. He is a Jew, as he an-nounced early in two days of conversations with a foreigner, and as enthusiastic a Soviet citizen as one could imagine.

He lives with his wife and young daughter in a two-room apartment in one of the fivestory brick apartment houses that are the basic living unit in Bratsk and all Siberia.

A table was set in the middle of the 10-by-15 foot living room for the guests from America and Mr. and Mrs. Alexei Marchuk. Mr. Marchuk is one of Bratsk's most famous pioneers, whose "Tatar eyes" struck Yevtushenko, and whose exploits are the subject of a popular song, "Marchuk Plays on his Guitar." In his thesis as an engineering student Mr. Marchuk proposed a new method for blocking a river to begin construction of a high dam, and his idea was used successfully at Bratsk. He is now nearly 40—a senior citizen in Bratsk, where the average age

The party was based on smoked fish, cucumbers, vodka, The tomatoes, canned peas, vodka, a delicious home-made cake, Soviet champagne and vodka.

Mrs. Guyrevich, a pretty blonde from Lyov in the Ukraine who misses the art gallery she worked in there, protected the ladies from some of the toasts, but it was a man's duty to drink every one. Many a soul, living and dead, had the benefit of a teast that night-from V, I. Lenin to the editor of the Washington Soon Mr. Marchuk's famous guitar appeared. Songs of all kinds and in all kinds of languages followed.

The party broke up after midnight when the guests shuffled out of the apartment. The halls and stairwell of the apartment house-about a mile from the second or third largest bydro-electric power station in the world-were pitch black.

The pioneers retain their en-town seems to have passed them by. The city's 180,000 residents of whom only 800 are needed to run the dam and power station) live in apartments as modern as any in Siberia. There is a theater downtown where opera companies come to perform. The trade unions have built a big holiday camp on the shore of the giant lake created by the dam.

Most of the population works and lives about 25 miles from the dam in what is now the main part of town. There the fivestory brick and prefabricated con-crete apartment houses go on for miles, like so many matchboxes scattered in clearings in the Taign.

blegest Bratsk are two huge factories that produce paper products and aluminum (from ore mined hundreds of miles away). They are located about a mile beyond the edge of town, and the workers get to the factories on a special train that goes back and forth between town and factory all day. Between shifts, when workers pour on and off the train the depot in town with the chimneys of the factories visible in the distance, it is a scene from a Karka dream.

Workers like these are the key to the future development of Siberia. More Marchuks will be needed to pioneer new cities and projects, but ordinary workers will always be the crucial factor. Siberia already has a labor shortage, and without enough labor the grandiose plans that have been drawn in Moscow will not be realized.

cent more money than they would in European Russia—their bonus for putting up with life in Siberia. Old-timers say a majority of the first pioneers have stayed in Bratsk, but between 25 and 40 percent of them have moved on to new adventures. or back to European Russia. Even the most dedicated old pioneers talk of leaving Bratsk eventually for more cosmopolitan homes in Europe, So far Bratsk does not seem like home.

Eurobonds Euro-Commercial Paper May Give Quiet Primary Market a Boost

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP-DJ).--The reintroduction last week of Euro-commercial paper (ECP), a type of financing that first appeared a year ago, may be significant to a currently quiet primary Eurobond market. J. Henry Schroder Wagg, which brought out the first three ECP issues in 1970, said Thursday that Honeywell Inc. plans 2 55 million ECP issue. Schroder Wagg and White, Weld and Co. are to maintain a secondary

Honeywell was holding back because the six-month Eurodollar rate is around 8.5 percent. The cost to a borrower of a small ECP issue, under $25 million, is marginally below that of a domestic bank loan. Notes can be fully redeemed or rolled over through issuance of new notes.

Most traders, particularly those involved in the large U.S. commercial paper market, are study-ing the potential of the ECP market even though issuing managers' commissions are lower than for a straight Eurodollar or Reintroduction of the ECP comes at a time when new issue activity is at a very low ebb because of the uncertainty surrounding the dollar and the possibility of new exchange rates.

Activity in ECP issues, particularly for U.S. borrowers, was delayed initially because the Bank of England refused permission to a large U.S. bank early in 1970 to make such an issue because it felt market conditions were "inappropriate."

Shortly after Schroder Wagg made its treble issue for $15 million, the United States Department of Commerce changed its regulations on overseas loans for U.S. corporations. Since then ECP issues have been found eligible to qualify as foreign long-

Profit-Taking, Wariness Over Next Nixon Move Pushes N.Y. Stock and Bond Prices Into a Slid

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, Sept. 12 ONYT).

The financial markets extended their buoyant "Nizon rally" early last week—the exuberant response to the administration's new economic program proclaimed so dramatically Aug. 15. But, toward the weekend, the markets turned gingerly downward in a display of wariness over the pos-sible outlines of the program's second phase starting in mid-November.

Some of the recent restraint in both the stock and bond markets was also obviously a result of profit-taking after the sharp upswing in prices that greeted the bold initiatives in Washington. The stock market closed narrowly mixed with small changes in the leading market averages, while the bond market's drive toward higher prices and lower in-terest rates halted as investors lost their enthusiasm after the last four weeks' substantial de-crease in yields.

Moreover, investors were hard-ly impressed with the President's pep talk to Congress on Thursday in which he sought bipartisan support for his economic legisla-tion. What Wall Street wants now are deeds, not rhetoric, in the great battle against inflation.

But the financial and business community did applaud the part of the President's address in which he promised that the system of wage and price stabilization to be invoked following expiration of the freeze on Nov. 13 would be temporary.

At the same time, Secretary of State William P. Rogers was telling a joint United States-Japanese cabinet meeting that while dated on foreign goods shipped here was temporary, "its removal must await a satisfactory settlement with our trading partners." He indicated that the United States felt that countries with chronic surpluses in their international payments had the obli-gation to take the necessary messures increasing imports, eliminating export incentives, stimulating capital outflows and raising the value of their currency exchange rates to bring the global balance of payments into equilibrium. The euphoria over the domestic and international economic package enunciated by President Nixon on Aug. 15 is still evident in the financial markets and fidence that it will accomplish many positive results.

Clearly, Wall Street and the sublic in general are counting on the administration to devise a forceful, workable blueprint for economic stability once the wageprice freeze is lifted.

The President's early assurance that the freeze will not be extended was somewhat surprising, inasmuch as it is realized that the construction and success of an effective post-freeze plan will obviously hinge on responsible fiscal and monetary actions in the meantime. That will be no easy task. The greatest danger is that Congress, in trying to redress some patent inequities in the vorthy social objectives is certainly a need to gran er tax benefits to the especially to low-incom earners, but caution onehit exercised that no en amount of tax conc spending increases are suff Meanwhile, apart from ticipatory jubiliation of the cial markets and the up justment of some leading currencies, there have been limited effects so far free President's new economic gram, but it is generally that it is too early to many concrete results.

Amex and Over-Counter

By Alexander R. Hammer

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (NYT).-Prices on the American Stock Exchange and on the Over-the-Counter market rose slightly last week although profit-taking in the last two days of trading erased some of the earlier gams. The profit-taking began mostly on Thursday following President Mixon's speech to Congress in which he said the wage-price freeze will end Nov. 13 but avoided details of what comes next. Analysts expressed disappointment that there was nothing new what to expect after the economic controls are lifted. .

The gains earlier in the week were attributed to a statement by the White House after the close of the market on Sept. 3 that Mr. Nixon opposed the imposition of an excess profits tax. Volume in both markets rose despite the shortened four-day trading week because of the Labor Day holiday. On the Amex, turnover climbed to 16,585,115 shares from 15,623,020 shares in the preceding week. The exchange's price index finished on Friday at 25.66, up 0.15 The NASDA industrial price index for the Over-the-Counter market rose 0.66 point to 112.23.

South ventured a weak twospade bid on the diagramed deal although the quality of the suit did not measure up to textbook standards. His partner could have raised directly to game, but chose to bid two no-trump, asking for further information about the opener's hand.

South's three-heart rebid was an aggressive call in the circumstances, and North bid the game in spades. The best defense would have been a trump lead, which would have put East to the test: The ace of trumps and a second trump would have given the declarer a chance to make 11 tricks, but the ace of spades and a shift to hearts would have put the contract in jeopardy. The game would theu be made by repeated ruffs in the closed hand, combined with one ruff in the dummy.

After the diamond lead, the plan of ruffing repeatedly in the South hand produced the valu-able overtrick. The dismond are won in dummy, the club ace was cashed and a club was ruffed. The heart was followed, and then a heart ruff, a second club ruff and a second heart ruff. The position was then this: NORTH

> WEST EAST ↑ 32 ♥ J10 SOUTH ♠ K1087 87

Another club was ruffed, and dummy was entered with a dismond lead. On the play of the last club, East was helpless. He discarded his heart and South ruffed again. The declarer exited with his diamond, and East had to ruff and conceded a trick to the spade king.

NORTH ♦ 16 🐥 AQ753 EAST ♦ 32 ♥ 110543 SOUTH (D) ♠ K108754 O A72

LIEUTENANT CALLEY His Own Story

Calley jr., convicted murderer of no fewer than 21 "Oriental hu-man beings," with an entirely open mind. One turned to the books, rather, in the hope of landing the painful boil of a dilemma. For after everything one had so far heard and thought and read about Calley and the massacre at My Lai 4 [which included, for anyone interested in the hibliography of the case, three comparatively superficial books published earlier this sum-mer: "The Making of a Hero: The Story of Lient. William Calley jr.," by Wayne Greenbaw (Touchstone, $6.95); "Calley," by Arthur Everett, Kathryn Johnson and Harry F. Rosenthal (an Associated Press Book, Dell, paper, $1.25) and "Calley: Soldier or Killer?" by Tom Tiede (Pinnacle, paper, 95 cents)] one's predisposition came down to this: On the one hand, one could understand, if not necessarily sympathize with the millions of people who felt that it was unjust to single Cal-ley out for punishment; obvious-ly, he did in some way reflect the American system, whether one judged that system to be good or bad. On the other hand, one was loath to leave it simply at that, and thereby deny him the choice between good and evil. For that would mean conceding something one hardly wished to concede: That human conduct is simply the end product of systems and the individual has no free choice between good and evil. So one turned to these two books in search of relief from this dilemma; and one hoped against Both books cut deep enough to touch the marrow but provide scant relief. In "His. Own Story," as told to John Sack, a free-lance journalist, Calley paints a picture of overwhelming circumstances. Without ever sniveling or excusing himself, he offers us a complex equation of pressures balancing his conduct. There was his lack of education, his unfitness to be an officer and his sketchy training at OCS, which took the trouble to teach him about blind obedience to orders but offered him nothing in the way of a context in which to judge them. There was the pressure of the battlefield once he reached Vietnam, the maddening invisibility of the enemy and the conviction that inevitably took hold of his troops that it was after all impossible to distinguish enemies from allies as long as they were Vietnamese. And on the morning March 16, 1968, there were crack enemy troops to engage and civilians to "get rid of" (the am-biguity of the phrase was itself an atrocity) and pressure, orders, lost tempers, fear, misunderstanding, hysteria and his own poor instincts to fall back upon. And on and on.

Upspeak's Rise, Fall

WASHINGTON. - For months mediate success. President Nixon President Nixon had been urging his countrymen to moderste their criticism of the country's flaws by matching the harsb word with a pat on the national back. "As we correct what is wreng in this nation, let us always speak np for what is right about America." he had been urging everyone, including the Con-

By autumn ef that year his campaign leog to bear

George Wallace was the first to take up the challenge when, after denouncing America's courts as contemptible one evening in Alabama, he closed with a fiery paean to root beer.

Baker

With eyes flashing fire and chin belligerently thrust this way and that, the governor told a wildly cheering audience that ef ail the things that were right about America, root beer was the rightest thing there was.

Three nights later, tough, grizzled, cigar-chewing George Meany, who had asked the networks for thirty minutes of prime time. told an audience of 75 million that labor had been too long remiss in oot speaking up for hot buttered popcorn.

While America's Republican economists were a disaster, he said, it had to be admitted that her hot buttered popcorn was absolutely right, particularly in ao excessively long movie ef the sort there seemed to be more and more ef at that time.

Mr. Meany's TV address to the nation occurred on a Friday, and his historical sketch of the development of the push-button melted-butter dispenser, which made it possible to deliver the real thing in the theater lebby, was the most gripping event seen on Friday night television in a decade.

Sensing the way the wind was blowing. Sen. J. W. Fulbright rose in the Senato the following week and delivered his now famous tribute to one-hour dry-

Whatever might be said in criticism ef the ceuntry's Vietnam war policy, he told enthustastically foot-stamping galleries. oe one could doubt that eur export to that unfortunate country of one-hour dry-cleaning knowhow would go down in history as a freshly pressed contributieo to Asian civilization.

The Fulbright "upspeak" for one-hour dry-cleaning provoked ao early-morning telephone call from Martha Mitchell to a tireless city editor. She said it was all very well for Fulbright to speak up for one-hour dry-cleaning, but if he had had any courage he would have spoken up at the same time fer a number of things that were even righter sbout America: to wit sirloin steak. Mad Magazine and the Grand Canyon.

To this point the "upspeak" had gone beautifully. Everybody could agree that root beer, bot buttered popcorn, one-hour dry-cleaning, sirloin steak, Mad Magazine and the Grand Canyon were absolutely right. The other things that everybody could agree upon were quickly snapped up as famous critics moved to speak up fearlessly.

Very soon, however, there was little about America left that everybody could agree was right. The difficulty began when Gov. Rockofeller issued a declaration just before Christmas speaking up for New Jersey. Mayor Lindsay immediately said that the governor didn't know what he was talking about. It was silly to put New Jersey in a class with root beer and hot buttered popcorn, the mayor said. This flare of old-fashicoed criticism was extremely refresbing to the people, who had be-come tired of "upspeaking" and yearned for something mere interesting. Bobby Seale made beadlines by denouncing roet beer after being told-erroneously, as it turned out-that Gov. Waliace had denounced the

Age of Iron Lives On in 128-Year-Old Hulk

By Alfred Friendly BRISTOL, England, Sept. 12 (WP).— The great ship, back in the same drydock from which it was floated 128 years ago, is now a hulk—dismasted, jagged holes in its iron plates, its woodwork torn and rotten. But it is still imposing. The clipper lines of its keel and bow have a dancer's grace; the outward swell of the hull above the waterline speaks of luxury and spaciousness. Overall, the genius of the greatest engineer of Britain's age of iron proclaims itself.

Its preeminence comes at you: the first iroo ship to cross the Atlantic and to do it by steam; the first by screw propeller; the biggest steamship built up to that time; the ship that innovated a dozen fundamental features in steamers constructed since then — watertight transverse bulkheads, balanced rudder, electric log, wire rigging, double bottom, hinged masts, hollow wrought-iron propeller shaft.

One Man's Genius

The pilgrimage starts at London's Paddington Station that was designed by Isambard Kingdom Brucel. You travel 118 miles over what was his Great Wes-tern Railroad, for which he engineered every foot of track, every bridge, cut and You end at Bristol, where lies the SS Great Britain, which he conceived, designed and constructed.

The SS Great Britain is being restored to the form and fittings he gave it in 1843; six masts, a single funnel, six-bladed propeller, grand promenade flanked by elegant staterooms, dining saloon 110 feet long, seating 300.

As an engineer, Brunel would be pleased with the salvage job that lifted the 3,000ton, 322-foot-long hulk from the seabed and with the 7,500-mile tow stop an oceangoing pontoon from the Falkland Islands, at the edge of the Antarctic Ocean, to safe harbor in Bristol in the drydock Brunel had to create to build what was, for the time, a veritable behemoth.

He was a little man and often wore an outsized stovepipe hat, perhaps to make himself seem taller. He was a dynamo who chain-smoked cigars and gesticulated like a Frenchman. He was born in 1806, the son of a Prench father, Sir Marc Isambard Brunel, who settled in England and became one of its foremost engineers.

As bold and outrageous as any of his tangible creations was the concept that ied him to what became his obsession of shipbuilding. One day in 1835, at a board meeting of the Great Western Railway (of which he was chief engineer and driving spirit), someone expressed misgivings at the enormous length of its proposed main line from London to Bristol.

"Why not make it longer, and have a steamboat go from Bristol to New York?" Brunel asked.

The first of his ships was made of wood. It was the Great Western, a paddlewheeler of 1,600 tons and the first ship to cross the Atlantic all the way by

It was barely affort before Brunel conceived of a craft twice as large. He had seen a smaller iron ship, used in coastal traffic, and resolved that his new one should be so constructed.

the second or head or dentit micht? & col mant i han sannin in the

Initially, however, it was to be a paddlewheeler. It was half built with places for engines amidships before Brunel spied little three-masted schooner, the Archimedes, with suriliary power driving not paddle wheels but a new screw propeller invested by Sir Francis Petit Smith.

Propulsion Problem

It was simple enough to envisage swinging engines through 90 degrees to drive a propeller under the stern instead of wheels on each beam. But the huge problem, which Brunel ultimately solved, was to carry the power generated by engines smidships along a drive shaft half the length of the ship back to the propeller.

The ship was launched on July 19, 1843. with enormous fanfare-Albert, the prince consort, did the ceremonial smashing of the champagne bottle.

After sea trials off Avonmouth, the Great Britain sailed to London for five months of fitting out. It was the wonder of the world: black bull with white trim and six

Right from the moment of its launching. when a too-easer tug snapped a line while it was still tethered to the drydock, the ship was bothered with engine and propelle troubles, especially on its second and third Atlantic trips. The fourth was satisfactory -it did both legs in 13 1/2 days-but the fifth was an utter disaster to the ship as Brunel conceived it.

SHARE, EXCHANGE

to note a new lighthouse, the Great Britain ran aground in Dundrum Bay, Northern Ireland. It stood on the sands, stormbuffeted for almost a year, saved partially by a novel mattress of posts and faggots that Brunel invented on the spot. The fact that it survived at all was in itself a triumph for Brunel; no wooden ship could have done it.

Company Bankrupted

When it limped back to Liverpool late in August, 1847, the estimated cost of re-pairs was beyond the resources of its owners. The Great Western Steamship Co. weni bankrupt.

The big ship was idlo until 1850, when it was sold for a fraction of its original The new owners took the backward but economic step of making it a three-masted; square-rigged sailing ship with auxiliary steam power from a new set of engines.

Thereupon, it was once again a success principally as a pessenger-cargo carrier to Melbourne, making 32 record-breaking trips until 1876.

In 1867, it was beaten on the homeward run rom Melbourne by a sailing ship. The writing was on the wall: the ship was obsolete. It was laid up in 1876 and not put into use again until six years later, stripped of its machinery, turned into a three-masted, full-rigged ship and made into a cargo carrier.

Under sail, it made two trips to San Francisco—the 45th and 46th in its his-tory—carrying out coal and bringing back wheat. But on its 47th voyage, the ship met heavy weather off Cape Horn and spent a month trying to round it. It eventually gave up and put back to Port Stanley, in the Falkland Islands, on May Repair facilities were inadequate and the ship was declared a total wreck. It was sold to a local company, which used it for 47 years as a floating warehouse for wool and coal.

By 1933, the ship had outlived all usefulness and, four years later, was towed a few miles away to a cove and scuttled. It sank a few feet into the sand; much of its decking was torn out to make a bridge and a jetty at Port Stanley.

Hull Still Intact

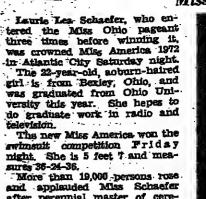

No one knows how long it might have taken for the ship to disintegrate. By 1968, when salvage efforts began, its hull was still intact.

Ever since 1942, when his imagination was caught by a print of the Great Britain in his offices, a British naval architect, Ewan Cortless, had dreamed of rescuing the ship and bringing it back home. Ultimately, a company was formed to do it and a British millionaire, Jack Hayward, offered $360,000 for the project.

It is not yet clear where the restored ship will ultimately come to rest as a museum, whether in Bristol or on the Thames, hard by Tower Bridge.
